Sai was looking for an advertisement to place in technology magazines. They asked me to come up with a catchy headline. They really loved this one.

They had some images of equipment but not all. I modelled some of the equipment in 3d.

I was hired to create a backdrop for the inauguration dinner of the new Catholic Archbishop in Vancouver. I built the Dove by layering shapes cut out of foamcore, fastened together with a 1/4" plywood breastplate. The foamcore body was then placed overtop, hiding the bolted plywood. Four 50' long Tyvek banners were attached to a length of 1' x 4" and secured at the floor with weights. Once assembled on location I had riggers attach 3 sections of 18 heavy wires in each to the ceiling beams.

My Original Concept Drawing.
